Forgetfulness, Feelings & Farnarkling

Forgetfulness, Feelings & Farnarkling Book

Reflections on Aged Care and How you can make a difference

Jenny Masters Illustrator

Author Anne Kelly

Forgetfulness, Feelings & Farnarkling (Farnarkling - the group activity where everyone sits around discussing the need to 'do something' but nothing actually happens – Urban Dictionary)

The project began in mid 2012 – an idea born from a discussion between two friends, artist Jenny Masters and dementia consultant Anne Kelly. Both had been touched in personal ways by dementia and had seen examples of skilled, compassionate care within dementia support services. However, they were also aware of examples of care deficits at individual or organisational level and the question arose "What can we do to change this?"

By telling peoples' own stories and highlighting aspects of life from the points of view of people living with dementia, and the people close to them, they hoped to encourage discussion and to challenge existing care systems and practise, with faith that any modern dynamic enterprise thrives on feedback from its customer base.

With occasional artistic license this collection of illustrations represents real people's stories from almost 30 years of working in aged care. The book uses humour as a strategy to encourage reflection of practice without defensiveness. We trust that these combined stories will provide strength of evidence of some outcomes of the current system of care and therefore will provoke reflection and action. Many examples of innovative actions are given.

Each illustration, its accompanying story and explanation gives life to the voices of people living with dementia.

This provocative and inspirational book.

"This is a must read for anyone who is connected personally or professionally to dementia care. Anne has beautifully captured the realities of living with dementia as well as the realities faced by those who work with such commitment and dedication to meeting the needs of those in their care. This book speaks to the need for change and provides practical suggestions that will help both families and professionals improve the lives of those living with dementia."

Spaced Retrieval Step by Step $65.00

Authors/Editors: Jeanette E Benigas, Jennifer A Brush, Gail M Elliot,.

Help your clients who have memory loss remember important information or actions with the proven memory training strategy of spaced retrieval (SR). Using this therapeutic communication method allows people to learn and store important information (such as when to take medications or how to use a walker) in long-term memory so that, with practice, it can be easily accessed and retrieved.

Now you can learn this innovative process step by step, from identifying a person's needs and desires, to creating the spaced retrieval format that supports those needs, to using SR practices to increase success in the person's daily routines. Plus, you'll get illustrative case studies, assessment forms, visual cueing tools, and tips for communication.

With SR, speech-language pathologists, occupational and physical therapists, nurses, and healthcare and homecare professionals at all levels of care can bring more confidence, safety, and independence into the lives of people with memory loss and their care partners.

Doll & Pet Therapy

□ Arthur Bear

"Arthur - a musical Teddy Bear for improving cognisance and engagement".

Comforting and engaging, 'Arthur', combines the profound benefits of targeted music with sensory and tactile feedback, with the engagement of something to be cherished and cared for.

Arthur is a combination of our experiences of the benefits of music and/or recorded messages for people living with cognisant difficulties such as dementia, learning disabilities and autism, combined with the widely accepted advantages offered by 'doll therapy'. The care and interaction with a comforting soft toy and the music or voice lead to feelings of security, enjoyment, whilst encouraging interaction.

"Don't forget that a Bear's heart starts beating once you touch it"

Just squeeze his "paw s button" the music will play - that's all you have to do!

ARTHUR - WHAT MAKES HIM TICK

Despite the enormous benefits of music and the security and comfort provided by Arthur, operating controls can be too much of a challenge for people with memory difficulties or issues of understanding. Arthur has been designed to be as simple as possible and his intended use is to be activated by friends family or carers, unburdening the user with this task.

Arthur only has one external control and that is to start and stop the music he has been preloaded with. The music has an automatic 'shuffle' mode which ensures that the playlist doesn't always start from the same place. It is most important that the music loaded into Arthur has meaning to the user; this is easy to do and will produce by far the best results

□ Blys Nightlight

"Much more than a lamp or nightlight ... Blys enables focussed security, spatial awareness, reduces falls and breakages, low impact illumination, and improves ambience for residents and staff alike"

"Most nursing home residents sleep with the light on due to anxiety - this promotes ill-temper, poor health and may accelerates dementia"

Blys™ is a sleek, modern light source designed with the specific needs of elderly people. Blys™ can be used as a nightlight or gentle bedroom lighting, and enables access to essential personal possessions during the night, aiding peace of mind and restful sleep.

As a nightlight it provides a low-level glow which allows uninterrupted sleep, but on waking it provides a focus in a room, allowing items such as bedside lights, spectacles, water, phone, and other personal items to be easily identified without switching the main light on.

A low level of light from the tray provides an immediate focus and sense of security if awakened during the night, whilst preventing the shock experienced when turning on conventional lighting, or the frustration of finding the light switch.

Winner of 2015 UK Building Better Healthcare Awards

The 17th annual Building Better Healthcare Awards held at The Brewery in central London on 4th November, 2015 saw E2L's Blys Nightlight for the elderly win the Award for Best Furniture Product

Specification

Blys™ measures 400mm by 400mm square and is only 25mm deep. It has four non-slip feet and is spill proof. Blys™ is available for delivery worldwide - it has a universal power supply with mains plugs to suit your country. Power consumption is very low; less than 700mA at 5V. The unit does not get hot, even at the maximum brightness.

It is controlled by means of a simple touch panel along the front facing side. Hand contact anywhere along the main edge of the unit switches on or off, and the brightness can be altered by touching two small 'bright' and 'dim' zones. Blys™ remembers its previous light setting when it's switched off.

Background Research

The Blys™ concept is derived from findings of 'SomnIA'; a four year research programme undertaken by a consortium of universities as part of the 'New Dynamics of Ageing' initiative. The main research partner was the Bath Institute of Medical Engineering (now called Designability)

The main aims were:

To understand the meanings and determinants of poor quality sleep among older people in the community and in residential settings.
To develop cost-effective approaches to non-pharmacological self-management of sleep problems among older people with chronic disease

Forgetfulness, Feelings & Farnarkling Book

Reflections on Aged Care and How you can make a difference

Jenny Masters Illustrator

Author Anne Kelly

Forgetfulness, Feelings & Farnarkling (Farnarkling - the group activity where everyone sits around discussing the need to 'do something' but nothing actually happens – Urban Dictionary)

The project began in mid 2012 – an idea born from a discussion between two friends, artist Jenny Masters and dementia consultant Anne Kelly. Both had been touched in personal ways by dementia and had seen examples of skilled, compassionate care within dementia support services. However, they were also aware of examples of care deficits at individual or organisational level and the question arose "What can we do to change this?"

By telling peoples' own stories and highlighting aspects of life from the points of view of people living with dementia, and the people close to them, they hoped to encourage discussion and to challenge existing care systems and practise, with faith that any modern dynamic enterprise thrives on feedback from its customer base.

With occasional artistic license this collection of illustrations represents real people's stories from almost 30 years of working in aged care. The book uses humour as a strategy to encourage reflection of practice without defensiveness. We trust that these combined stories will provide strength of evidence of some outcomes of the current system of care and therefore will provoke reflection and action. Many examples of innovative actions are given.

Each illustration, its accompanying story and explanation gives life to the voices of people living with dementia.

This provocative and inspirational book.

"This is a must read for anyone who is connected personally or professionally to dementia care. Anne has beautifully captured the realities of living with dementia as well as the realities faced by those who work with such commitment and dedication to meeting the needs of those in their care. This book speaks to the need for change and provides practical suggestions that will help both families and professionals improve the lives of those living with dementia."

Interactive Activities

□ Simple Music Player

The 'Simple Music Player' has been designed to be as easy as possible to operate for the end user; that is, the person with dementia. Setting up the player is undertaken by friends, family or carers, as a one time process. Extensive trialling has verified that the operation is highly intuitive and does not require any prior knowledge or memory to start and stop the player. The styling is also reminiscent of old radios and is instantly recognisable as something which plays music.

To operate, there are only three controls:

- Start playing music - just lift the lid
- Skip this song - (optional) press the big button
- Stop the music - close the lid

The music will always continue from where it was last stopped

The beneficial effects of music for people with dementia are quite outstanding; both for improving the quality of life, especially when living alone, and for its healthy restorative effects on cognizance and lucidity. A recurring problem however, has been the difficulties people with dementia face when trying to operate modern music playing equipment. Remembering how controls operate or manipulation of knobs, non-tactile buttons, and an array of confusing symbols all limit access to this well proved benefit. Setting up the Simple Music Player

Setting up is undertaken by friends, family, or carers. There are two essential operations: Setting the volume and uploading the playlist. To upload a playlist the Simple Music Player is plugged into a computer. The process is well described in operating instructions making 'set-up' as easy as possible.

The volume control is designed to avoid being accidentally changed by the user. This could lead to the music being far too loud and disturbing, or too quiet so it may appear to be 'broken' if hard of hearing or confused.

To adjust the volume, using a pencil or similar, press and hold one of the buttons underneath the player. You don't need to press too hard; you should feel a gentle click like on a keyboard or doorbell. Only after holding the control for 5 seconds the volume will begin to increase or decrease, so it can be set to the appropriate level.

Specifications Overview

'Simple Music Player' is an MP3 (and other formats) player which comes in three versions: Red, Green and Burr-Walnut. They are functionally identical so they all operate in the same way. The intention is for the player to be installed and left powered on, allowing the user to operate it at will without any other requirement than to lift or lower the lid to start or stop the music. The only other control available to the regular user is a large button which skips onto the next tune when pressed. Their construction is highly durable consisting of a strong wooden enclosure with a high strength plastic covering. The loudspeaker grille is cloth finished but reinforced with a steel mesh to avoid any damage to the speaker. Rubber feet ensure that the player does not slip. It can be wiped down with a damp cloth if required.

The player has been designed with the minimum of controls and has been extensively tested as well as trialled by the Bath Institute of Medical Engineering (now 'Designability'). On the back panel there are additional facilities for particular personal requirements. If headphones are required, then the green socket accepts a stereo jack-plug. (Note: headphones can be extremely loud and cause hearing damage) For people with dexterity problems rather than dementia related conditions the 'ON/OFF' control and 'NEXT TUNE' buttons can be over-ridden by means of remote switches plugged into the two available sockets (note: the lid has to be closed for these controls to work).

□ Arthur Bear

"Arthur - a musical Teddy Bear for improving cognizance and engagement".

Comforting and engaging, 'Arthur', combines the profound benefits of targeted music with sensory and tactile feedback, with the engagement of something to be cherished and cared for.

Arthur is a combination of our experiences of the benefits of music and/or recorded messages for people living with cognitivist difficulties such as dementia, learning disabilities and autism, combined with the widely accepted advantages offered by 'doll therapy'. The care and interaction with a comforting soft toy and the music or voice lead to feelings of security, enjoyment, whilst encouraging interaction.

"Don't forget that a Bear's heart starts beating once you touch it"

Just squeeze his "paw s button" the music will play - that's all you have to do!

ARTHUR - WHAT MAKES HIM TICK

Despite the enormous benefits of music and the security and comfort provided by Arthur, operating controls can be too much of a challenge for people with memory difficulties or issues of understanding. Arthur has been designed to be as simple as possible and his intended use is to be activated by friends family or carers, unburdening the user with this task.

Arthur only has one external control and that is to start and stop the music he has been preloaded with. The music has an automatic 'shuffle' mode which ensures that the playlist doesn't always start from the same place. It is most important that the music loaded into Arthur has meaning to the user; this is easy to do and will produce by far the best results

□ Digital Jigsaws

These Interactive Jigsaw Puzzles are easy to do and just like conventional jigsaw puzzles they can be played over and over again.

These Jigsaw Puzzles (not MAC compatible) have been a big hit for the right person. They're an excellent alternative to physical paper, board or wooden jigsaw s. At times people may not be able to handle these if they have problems with their hands. Best of all the pieces don't get lost.

People don't need to know how to use a computer, they just need to be taught how to use a mouse or a laptop touchpad/mousepad. A touch screen computer/laptop is even easier to use and of course, for some people, the bigger the screen the better.

Interactive Jigsaw Puzzles are great for stimulating the mind, reminiscing, armchair travel and hand/eye coordination. The colourful photographs which are used for the puzzles present a more realistic view of the world than perhaps cartoon-type illustrations aimed at children.

Each of the 5 CD's contains 25 interactive jigsaw puzzles which can be played on a personal computer or laptop. Five photos have been made into jigsaw puzzles of 12, 24, 40, 104 and 260 pieces (suitable for different skill levels and something for the carers as well). Instructions are included on the CD.

Some older people do enjoy learning a new skill and they do have the capacity to learn new tricks. Don't underestimate them. However, in some instances, it is better to say "screen" than "computer" because people tend to be more accustomed to a TV screen rather than a computer.

There's an audible click when pieces are placed in the correct position and the player is congratulated when the jigsaw puzzle is complete, giving that sense of achievement.

Interactive Jigsaw Puzzles almost become giant apps when used with an interactive white board or a TV sized touch screen.

□ Forgetfulness, Feelings & Farnarkling

Forgetfulness, Feelings & Farnarkling Book

Reflections on Aged Care and How you can make a difference

Jenny Masters Illustrator

Author Anne Kelly

Forgetfulness, Feelings & Farnarkling (Farnarkling - the group activity where everyone sits around discussing the need to 'do something' but nothing actually happens – Urban Dictionary)

The project began in mid 2012 – an idea born from a discussion between two friends, artist Jenny Masters and dementia consultant Anne Kelly. Both had been touched in personal ways by dementia and had seen examples of skilled, compassionate care within dementia support services. However, they were also aware of examples of care deficits at individual or organisational level and the question arose "What can we do to change this?"

By telling peoples' own stories and highlighting aspects of life from the points of view of people living with dementia, and the people close to them, they hoped to encourage discussion and to challenge existing care systems and practise, with faith that any modern dynamic enterprise thrives on feedback from its customer base.

With occasional artistic license this collection of illustrations represents real people's stories from almost 30 years of working in aged care. The book uses humour as a strategy to encourage reflection of practice without defensiveness. We trust that these combined stories will provide strength of evidence of some outcomes of the current system of care and therefore will provoke reflection and action. Many examples of innovative actions are given.

Each illustration, its accompanying story and explanation gives life to the voices of people living with dementia.

This provocative and inspirational book.

"This is a must read for anyone who is connected personally or professionally to dementia care. Anne has beautifully captured the realities of living with dementia as well as the realities faced by those who work with such commitment and dedication to meeting the needs of those in their care. This book speaks to the need for change and provides practical suggestions that will help both families and professionals improve the lives of those living with dementia."

□ Spaced Retrieval Step by Step $65.00

Authors/Editors: Jeanette E Benigas, Jennifer A Brush, Gail M Elliot,.

Help your clients who have memory loss remember important information or actions with the proven memory training strategy of spaced retrieval (SR). Using this therapeutic communication method allows people to learn and store important information (such as when to take medications or how to use a walker) in long-term memory so that, with practice, it can be easily accessed and retrieved.

Now you can learn this innovative process step by step, from identifying a person's needs and desires, to creating the spaced retrieval format that supports those needs, to using SR practices to increase success in the person's daily routines. Plus, you'll get illustrative case studies, assessment forms, visual cueing tools, and tips for communication.

With SR, speech-language pathologists, occupational and physical therapists, nurses, and healthcare and homecare professionals at all levels of care can bring more confidence, safety, and independence into the lives of people with memory loss and their care partners.

Practical Help

□ Simple Music Player

The 'Simple Music Player' has been designed to be as easy as possible to operate for the end user; that is, the person with dementia. Setting up the player is undertaken by friends, family or carers, as a one time process. Extensive trialling has verified that the operation is highly intuitive and does not require any prior knowledge or memory to start and stop the player. The styling is also reminiscent of old radios and is instantly recognisable as something which plays music.

To operate, there are only three controls:

- Start playing music - just lift the lid
- Skip this song - (optional) press the big button
- Stop the music - close the lid

The music will always continue from where it was last stopped

The beneficial effects of music for people with dementia are quite outstanding; both for improving the quality of life, especially when living alone, and for its healthy restorative effects on cognition and lucidity. A recurring problem however, has been the difficulties people with dementia face when trying to operate modern music playing equipment. Remembering how controls operate or manipulation of knobs, non-tactile buttons, and an array of confusing symbols all limit access to this well proved benefit. Setting up the Simple Music Player

Setting up is undertaken by friends, family, or carers. There are two essential operations: Setting the volume and uploading the playlist. To upload a playlist the Simple Music Player is plugged into a computer. The process is well described in operating instructions making 'set-up' as easy as possible.

The volume control is designed to avoid being accidentally changed by the user. This could lead to the music being far too loud and disturbing, or too quiet so it may appear to be 'broken' if hard of hearing or confused.

To adjust the volume, using a pencil or similar, press and hold one of the buttons underneath the player. You don't need to press too hard; you should feel a gentle click like on a keyboard or doorbell. Only after holding the control for 5 seconds the volume will begin to increase or decrease, so it can be set to the appropriate level.

Specifications Overview

'Simple Music Player' is an MP3 (and other formats) player which comes in three versions: Red, Green and Burr-Walnut. They are functionally identical so they all operate in the same way. The intention is for the player to be installed and left powered on, allowing the user to operate it at will without any other requirement than to lift or lower the lid to start or stop the music. The only other control available to the regular user is a large button which skips onto the next tune when pressed. Their construction is highly durable consisting of a strong wooden enclosure with a high strength plastic covering. The loudspeaker grille is cloth finished but reinforced with a steel mesh to avoid any damage to the speaker. Rubber feet ensure that the player does not slip. It can be wiped down with a damp cloth if required.

The player has been designed with the minimum of controls and has been extensively tested as well as trialled by the Bath Institute of Medical Engineering (now 'Designability'). On the back panel there are additional facilities for particular personal requirements. If headphones are required, then the green socket accepts a stereo jack-plug. (Note: headphones can be extremely loud and cause hearing damage) For people with dexterity problems rather than dementia related conditions the 'ON/OFF' control and 'NEXT TUNE' buttons can be over-ridden by means of remote switches plugged into the two available sockets (note: the lid has to be closed for these controls to work).

□ Blys Nightlight

"Much more than a lamp or nightlight ... Blys enables focussed security, spatial awareness, reduces falls and breakages, low impact illumination, and improves ambience for residents and staff alike"

"Most nursing home residents sleep with the light on due to anxiety - this promotes ill-temper, poor health and may accelerates dementia"

Blys™ is a sleek, modern light source designed with the specific needs of elderly people. Blys™ can be used as a nightlight or gentle bedroom lighting, and enables access to essential personal possessions during the night, aiding peace of mind and restful sleep.

As a nightlight it provides a low-level glow which allows un-interrupted sleep, but on waking it provides a focus in a room, allowing items such as bedside lights, spectacles, water, phone, and other personal items to be easily identified without switching the main light on.

A low level of light from the tray provides an immediate focus and sense of security if wakened during the night, whilst preventing the shock experienced when turning on conventional lighting, or the frustration of finding the light switch.

Winner of 2015 UK Building Better Healthcare Awards

The 17th annual Building Better Healthcare Awards held at The Brewery in central London on 4th November, 2015 saw E2L's Blys Nightlight for the elderly win the Award for Best Furniture Product

Specification

Blys™ measures 400mm by 400mm square and is only 25mm deep. It has four non-slip feet and is spill proof
 Blys™ is available for delivery worldwide - it has a universal power supply with mains plugs to suit your country.
 Power consumption is very low; less than 700mA at 5V. The unit does not get hot, even at the maximum brightness

It is controlled by means of a simple touch panel along the front facing side. Hand contact anywhere along the main edge of the unit switches on or off, and the brightness can be altered by touching two small 'bright' and 'dim' zones. Blys™ remembers its previous light setting when it's switched off.

Background Research

The Blys™ concept is derived from findings of 'SomnIA'; a four year research programme undertaken by a consortium of universities as part of the 'New Dynamics of Ageing' initiative. The main research partner was the Bath Institute of Medical Engineering (now called Designability)

The main aims were:

To understand the meanings and determinants of poor quality sleep among older people in the community and in residential settings.
To develop cost-effective approaches to non-pharmacological self-management of sleep problems among older people with chronic disease

Simple Music Player

The 'Simple Music Player' has been designed to be as easy as possible to operate for the end user; that is, the person with dementia. Setting up the player is undertaken by friends, family or carers, as a one time process. Extensive trialling has verified that the operation is highly intuitive and does not require any prior knowledge or memory to start and stop the player. The styling is also reminiscent of old radios and is instantly recognisable as something which plays music.

To operate, there are only three controls:

- Start playing music - just lift the lid
- Skip this song - (optional) press the big button
- Stop the music - close the lid

The music will always continue from where it was last stopped

The beneficial effects of music for people with dementia are quite outstanding; both for improving the quality of life, especially when living alone, and for its healthy restorative effects on cognizance and lucidity. A recurring problem however, has been the difficulties people with dementia face when trying to operate modern music playing equipment. Remembering how controls operate or manipulation of knobs, non-tactile buttons, and an array of confusing symbols all limit access to this well proved benefit. Setting up the Simple Music Player

Setting up is undertaken by friends, family, or carers. There are two essential operations: Setting the volume and uploading the playlist. To upload a playlist the Simple Music Player is plugged into a computer. The process is well described in operating instructions making 'set-up' as easy as possible.

The volume control is designed to avoid being accidentally changed by the user. This could lead to the music being far too loud and disturbing, or too quiet so it may appear to be 'broken' if hard of hearing or confused.

To adjust the volume, using a pencil or similar, press and hold one of the buttons underneath the player. You don't need to press too hard; you should feel a gentle click like on a keyboard or doorbell. Only after holding the control for 5 seconds the volume will begin to increase or decrease, so it can be set to the appropriate level.

Specifications Overview

'Simple Music Player' is an MP3 (and other formats) player which comes in three versions: Red, Green and Burr-Walnut. They are functionally identical so they all operate in the same way. The intention is for the player to be installed and left powered on, allowing the user to operate it at will without any other requirement than to lift or lower the lid to start or stop the music. The only other control available to the regular user is a large button which skips onto the next tune when pressed. Their construction is highly durable consisting of a strong wooden enclosure with a high strength plastic covering. The loudspeaker grille is cloth finished but reinforced with a steel mesh to avoid any damage to the speaker. Rubber feet ensure that the player does not slip. It can be wiped down with a damp cloth if required.

The player has been designed with the minimum of controls and has been extensively tested as well as trialled by the Bath Institute of Medical Engineering (now 'Designability'). On the back panel there are additional facilities for particular personal requirements. If headphones are required, then the green socket accepts a stereo jack-plug. (Note: headphones can be extremely loud and cause hearing damage) For people with dexterity problems rather than dementia related conditions the 'ON/OFF' control and 'NEXT TUNE' buttons can be over-ridden by means of remote switches plugged into the two available sockets (note: the lid has to be closed for these controls to work).

□ Arthur Bear

"Arthur - a musical Teddy Bear for improving cognisance and engagement".

Comforting and engaging, 'Arthur', combines the profound benefits of targeted music with sensory and tactile feedback, with the engagement of something to be cherished and cared for.

Arthur is a combination of our experiences of the benefits of music and/or recorded messages for people living with cognitivist difficulties such as dementia, learning disabilities and autism, combined with the widely accepted advantages offered by 'doll therapy'. The care and interaction with a comforting soft toy and the music or voice lead to feelings of security, enjoyment, whilst encouraging interaction.

"Don't forget that a Bear's heart starts beating once you touch it"

Just squeeze his "paw s button" the music will play - that's all you have to do!

ARTHUR - WHAT MAKES HIM TICK

Despite the enormous benefits of music and the security and comfort provided by Arthur, operating controls can be too much of a challenge for people with memory difficulties or issues of understanding. Arthur has been designed to be as simple as possible and his intended use is to be activated by friends family or carers, unburdening the user with this task.

Arthur only has one external control and that is to start and stop the music he has been preloaded with. The music has an automatic 'shuffle' mode which ensures that the playlist doesn't always start from the same place. It is most important that the music loaded into Arthur has meaning to the user; this is easy to do and will produce by far the best results

“Much more than a lamp or nightlight ... Blys enables focussed security, spatial awareness, reduces falls and breakages, low impact illumination, and improves ambience for residents and staff alike”

“Most nursing home residents sleep with the light on due to anxiety - this promotes ill-temper, poor health and may accelerates dementia”

Blys™ is a sleek, modern light source designed with the specific needs of elderly people. Blys™ can be used as a nightlight or gentle bedroom lighting, and enables access to essential personal possessions during the night, aiding peace of mind and restful sleep.

As a nightlight it provides a low-level glow which allows uninterrupted sleep, but on waking it provides a focus in a room, allowing items such as bedside lights, spectacles, water, phone, and other personal items to be easily identified without switching the main light on.

A low level of light from the tray provides an immediate focus and sense of security if wakened during the night, whilst preventing the shock experienced when turning on conventional lighting, or the frustration of finding the light switch.

Winner of 2015 UK Building Better Healthcare Awards

The 17th annual Building Better Healthcare Awards held at The Brewery in central London on 4th November, 2015 saw E2L's Blys Nightlight for the elderly win the Award for Best Furniture Product

Specification

Blys™ measures 400mm by 400mm square and is only 25mm deep. It has four non-slip feet and is spill proof. Blys™ is available for delivery worldwide - it has a universal power supply with mains plugs to suit your country. Power consumption is very low; less than 700mA at 5V. The unit does not get hot, even at the maximum brightness.

It is controlled by means of a simple touch panel along the front facing side. Hand contact anywhere along the main edge of the unit switches on or off, and the brightness can be altered by touching two small 'bright' and 'dim' zones. Blys™ remembers its previous light setting when it's switched off.

Background Research

The Blys™ concept is derived from findings of 'SomnIA'; a four year research programme undertaken by a consortium of universities as part of the 'New Dynamics of Ageing' initiative. The main research partner was the Bath Institute of Medical Engineering (now called Designability)

The main aims were:

To understand the meanings and determinants of poor quality sleep among older people in the community and in residential settings.
To develop cost-effective approaches to non-pharmacological self-management of sleep problems among older people with chronic disease

Sensory Snap is a new tactile association game created to stimulation multiple senses and encourage conversation for people living with mid-late stage dementia.

How It Works

Sensory Snap is a tactile game with a purpose, feel and match the tiles to the images or group the tiles together based on association. Players are thereby encouraged to create new associations or may simply wish to feel and discuss the textures. This type of activity is used in cognitive stimulation therapy which has been proven to be a powerful tool in the care of people living with dementia.

The product can also be used as a simple tactile product to stimulate the senses of people living with later stage dementia.

The Sensory Snap tiles are durable and easily cleaned, making them popular in professional care settings as well as in the home.

Our unique range of colouring books have been designed for people with early to mid-stage dementia. Simple, age-appropriate illustrations and prompts help the user complete each image unassisted.
